ABOUT

Cobalt 373

2009 Cobalt 373 — Rare Performance Cruiser with Twin Mercury 496 MAGs

A rare opportunity to own one of Cobalt's most impressive, capable performance cruisers.

This 2009 Cobalt 373 combines the fit, finish, comfort, and craftsmanship Cobalt is known for with the kind of performance and offshore handling that makes this boat equally at home cruising the coastline, running across open water, or entertaining family and friends.

This particular 373 is especially desirable, powered by twin Mercury 496 MAG engines and equipped with brand-new Axius joystick controls, giving the boat an exceptional combination of power, control, and maneuverability around the dock.

The 373 is a substantial boat with a deep, capable hull and a solid feel underway. At speed, the hull tracks confidently through open water and provides the stability and predictable handling you want when conditions begin to build.

Whether you're making a long coastal run or simply enjoying a fast afternoon on the water, the 373 delivers a level of confidence that separates it from many smaller express cruisers.

Why the Cobalt 373??

The Cobalt 373 is a relatively uncommon model, making well-equipped examples particularly difficult to find. It offers the performance of a serious powerboat while retaining the amenities and comfort expected from a premium express cruiser.

Inside, the boat provides a spacious, comfortable environment for extended days on the water, weekend cruising, or entertaining. The cockpit is designed around socializing, with ample seating and a layout that allows everyone to stay connected while underway or at anchor.

Below deck, the 373 provides the accommodations necessary for overnight cruising, giving the boat genuine versatility beyond a simple day cruiser.

This is a boat built to be driven. The combination of the Cobalt hull, twin 496 MAG power, and new Axius joystick system makes the 373 particularly appealing to a buyer looking for a boat that can deliver both exhilarating performance and confidence when operating in real-world coastal conditions.
